

TALKING THE WALK

Developing your capacity for theological reflection in life and work

Talking the walk—an approach to what is commonly called theological reflection—is all about how we make meaning of experience in relation to faith, and are formed to then ‘walk the talk’. This subject uses the Road via Emmaus story from Luke 24 and the image of the labyrinth to offer three basic movements for talking the walk: conversation, discernment, and embodiment. It aims to develop you and those you engage with in faithful reflective practice, shaped for God’s flourishing of self, others and world. The emphasis is upon doing theological reflection, and not just talking about it!

BRUCE HULME

Bruce Hulme is passionate about helping others ‘talk the walk’ in ways that cultivate deep, reflective, and congruent living. This is expressed through his teaching in reflection, formation, pastoral care and spirituality. Bruce’s approach to learning and teaching is founded upon the potency of vulnerability, hospitality and mutuality in the educator-student encounter; his hope is that others engage with not only what he knows, but also with who he is.
